Franklin Report - A Guide to Home Services

So you want to re-do your kitchen or maybe you are about to build a new home from the ground up. Until now, finding the right people to do the job was a job in itself. Now Eyewitness News consumer specialist Ric Romero tells you how you can get your hands on the ultimate "insider guide" to home services.

When it comes to home improvement good help can be hard to find and not hiring the right crew, can cost you hundreds -- not to mention the headaches. That is where the Franklin Report comes in.

Elizabeth Franklin launched the guide in the big apple and now she's taking on Los Angeles with reviews that'll give you the edge on who to hire for your home improvement project.

The guide includes chapter on: computer experts, furniture restorers, movers and window specialists. The ratings are based on interviews with clients, input from industry pros, and surveys.

The L.A. Franklin Report is especially tailored to Southland homeowners. There's an emphasis on swimming pools, landscaping and the complicated construction of hillside homes.

And in a "very L.A." way the Franklin report does a little name-dropping. Profiles of the service providers include the celebrities they've worked for.

The Franklin Report is also online. On their web-site you can see hundreds of photographs of the work done by people listed in the book.
